- 7. A sheik from Yangi Hissar, (the Turki name for the town). CIA-167694
- 8. An open shop at the roadside in the vicinity of Kashgar. The veiled woman is a Moslem. Home-made knives, etc. are for sale. CIA-167683
- 9. A Moslem cemetery in Kashgar. The caskets are shallowly buried and these mounds of mud bricks built over them. CIA-167684
- 10. Selling jujubes (dried fruit) at a street vendor's stand. The fruit is steamed and people buy a bit for refreshment as they shop in the market. Kashgar.
- 11. A Moslem mutton shop. (They do not eat pork.) Kashgar. C/A -167686
- 12. Winter garb of the Turki people. This is a street barber at work. The boots are frequently in two pieces, and in the house, the lower section is removed when they squat on rugs (used also for beds), such as the one shown in picture 5.
- 13. A Turki man in Kashgar. C/A 167688
- 14. A miscellaneous wares shop in Kashgar. CIA-167689
- 15. Part of the city wall at Kashgar. CIA-167690
- 16. Kashgar street scene typical of the type of construction done by Chinese living in this area. The courtyards are all on the inside £10-1676
- 17. Soviet cotton cloth being sold at a roadside stand outside Kashgar. CIA 167692
- 18. Turki muleteers preparing their bread. CIA-1676
- 19. A travel tent of double cotton cloth. It is a Mongol type with the flaps open. Those who can afford it have the top layer shown here for protection from rain. This is on the road into India near Tash Kurghan.
- 20. A Chinese pony caravan getting ready for the journey in the morning. Camels cannot be used in the Himalayas, so these ponies are used. CIA 167672
- 21. Making our way through the Himalayas. No road was indicated here, so our guides simply took us through the rocks. CIA-1673
- 22. Typical mountain roads in Sinkiang, hardly kept up. We lost three animals on such roads. The animals keep away from the mountain side to avoid the packs scraping, and occasionally they misjudged their CIA-167674 footing.
- 23. Mintaka Pass on the border between India and Sinkiang. CIA /67676

- 24. This road picture cannot be pinpointed. It might possibly have been on the Indian side, but source does not think so as the Indian roads were usually much better kept than the Chinese, who seemed to pay no attention to maintenance. This looks like the Chinese work. CIA-167675
- 25. White Russian children. Urumchi.4167695

26. and Chinese New Year celebration, by the Shansi people in Ch-Tái. 27. C/A-167699 + 167700
